This motion picture consists of a film of one thousand feet taken in Hungary in October and November, 1918. The picture depicts scenes from actual life in Buda Pest and other parts of Hungary, showing among other things, the proclamation of the Hungarian Republic in front of the Parliament building; Count Karolyi and others addressing the people; revolutionary soldiers rushing through the streets, public demonstrations, etc.

The picture was taken from actual life in Hungary, and brought to the United States by Bela A Sekely, a citizen of the United States, who has assigned all interest and rights therein to the East European Press Inc.
